ABSTRACT

A method and system for electronically updating a printed publication with data stored electronically comprises a label that is affixed to the location in the publication to be updated. The label includes a code that can be entered into a computer, terminal, or computer system, which in turn locates the data and provides the data as output.